While serving as Watch Commander on 08/22/89 at approximately 1810 hours, I received a phone call from a male who stated he wanted to "pass along" along some information in referen to the barrels that had been discovered in the river. He advised that he was a former employee of the Canton Marine & Towing Service which also operated a barge cleaning service. He said the company docks were located almost directly across the river from the area where the barrels were reportedly discovered. The unidentified subject went on to say that he knew "for a fact" that it was common practice for company employees to dump chemicals in the river. The caller advised he had personally witnessed the dumping of oil and iron oxide in the river on more than one occasion.

I then inquired as to the method used to deposit the material in the river. The caller stated that to his knowledge the chemicals were poured directly into the river. He advised that at no time had he ever observed any containers deposited in the river, however he stated the dumping was always done at night to avoid detection. I also asked what other types of chemicals could have ben dumped into the river, and the caller said that just about anything transported by barge, or utilized to clean barges, had probably been placed in the river. The anonymous caller further stated that he had no direct knowledge of teh company ever dumping barrels or drums of any kind in the river, but thought it highly suspicious that the chemical containing barrels had been discovered directly across the river from the barge docks used by Canton Marine & Towing. The caller then hung up.

I did try several times to get the caller to identify himself, however he refused to do so. It is my belief, based on the subjects dialect and tone of voice, that he was a younger, adult white male.
